STUDENTS GRATEFUL TO FRIEND OF SCHOOL

The pupils of the Jefferson Union high school were recently the recipients of a gift that is being appreciated to a greater extent every day it is in use—a splendid new 7 tube Majestic radio.

The radio was presented to the student body by a friend of the school who expressed the wish that his name should be withheld, but the pupils and faculty are none the less grateful, even though they may not make known to all the name of the generous donor.

It was decided by the student body and faculty that this public spirited citizen should at least be made acquainted with the fact that his gift was appreciated, and the students decided to express their appreciation by letter. Among the letters written, three were chosen as excelling in different ways. The writers of these three letters were Mary Collins, Evelyn Hanschen and Ethel Johnson. The letter written by Miss Hanschen was awarded the honor of publication in the high school weekly, the Totem Pole. It follows:

Dear Santa Claus:

You remember the old but true saying: "A friend in need is a friend indeed"? It seems that this proverb was made for such people as you.

Jefferson Union high school needed a radio, and you, hearing of the need, kindly sent it to us for our use and withheld your name. Mr. Ferguson told us you were the Santa Claus of Daly City, but you also are the Santa Claus of our high school.

I am only one of the many that wish to extend their heartfelt thanks to you for your kindness. You can be sure that when we listen to the wonderful music coming from your gift we are thinking of the unknown sender and are very grateful to our Santa Claus for his splendid gift.

Sincerely yours,
EVELYN HANSCHEN.

COSTUME PARTY GIVEN BY ROYAL NEIGHBORS

A most delightful and interesting costume party was enjoyed at the home of Mrs. D. Putney, of Woodrow street, on Tuesday evening, by the Royal Neighbors of Vista Grande Camp. Whist and music was the hours' entertainment, after which much fun was enjoyed picking the costumes for honors. Mrs. J. Headvall wore the most unique costume. Her dress was spun, woven, made and worn by herself in Finland before she reached the age of 15 years. Mrs. Cliver took the part and looked a perfect Dinah, and carried it out when she assisted the hostess in serving and entertaining the guests with her appropriate remarks. There were many pretty and original character costumes. Honors were awarded for both whist players and costumes, and were both pretty and unusual.

Refreshments were served at 11 p. m., and those who had the pleasure of being present enjoyed it all immensely. Following is the list of guests: Dolly Putney, Mary White, Clarice Scott, Johanna Headvall, Lucy Nelson, Gertrude Gehringer, Maude Appleton, Ellen Brulez, Anna Romer, Mary Nilson, Lena Wilson, Mary Rampi, Emily Twesten, Anna Welch, Helen Cliver, Anna Dennis, Hazel Wilson, May Richardson, and Lillian Landini.

COMPANY 3 ENJOYS BIRTHDAY DINNER

According to custom, the members of Company No. 3, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, held their birthday dinner at their fire house on Westlake avenue on Thursday evening of last week. Every three months these dinners are given in honor of all members whose birthdays fall within the month of the dinner and the two previous months.

The guests of honor this time were Jack Kennedy, Al Green, H. Hutchings, Martin Johnson and Alex Cameron.

A wonderful dinner was prepared by Chief Cook Theo. Wickersham. A thrity-one pound pig, roasted at the Relish, was the main dish, and nothing was forgotten to make this dinner one of perfection.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE LOCATED IN NEW HOME

The Baptist Young Peoples' Union of Calvary Baptist Mission invites all young people of Daly City to come and visit their new home, on Mission street, just below the State Theatre, on the opposite side of the street. They say: "We are not hard to get acquainted with, and when you get to know us you will like us. The meeting time is 6:40 Sunday evenings. We have more than forty young people on our list of regular attendance, and they are all alive and ready to go. In B. Y. P. U. is a good place to spend Sunday evening."

EAGLES TO OBSERVE 20TH ANNIVERSARY

On Thursday evening, February 7, Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles, will celebrate its twentieth anniversary, the Aerie having been organized in 1909. In addition to the anniversary celebration, the members of the local Aerie will entertai the Worthy Grand President, Edward W. J. Ryan.

This occasion will be of additional interest to twenty members of the Aerie, who will be presented with veteran pins by the Grand President. Those who are to be presented veteran pins are Antone Sturla, Larry Shaw, James T. Casey, John Doyle, John Egan, I. Friedman, S. Emanuel, A. Herschel, Matt Grady, Urban Granucci, Joseph J. Poket, Hugh Rodgers, William J. Sweeney, Louis Seiberlich, Eugene Rodgers, and John Zweissig.

The meeting will take place at the Daly City Auditorium, on Wellington avenue. A banquet will be held in the Eagles Hall, on Mission street, right across from the Auditorium, after the initiatory service and presentation of pins.

A large class initiation is to take place in honor of the twenty veterans and Worthy Grand President Edward J. W. Ryan.

The committee in charge of the evening's entertainment invites all Eagles to be present, not only the members of their own Aerie, but also of Aeries in the county. William Bolger, President of the Colma-Vista Grande Aerie, assures all present a good time. Remember the date, February 7.

YOUNG FOLKS SPRING SURPRISE ON FRIEND

Raynold Viotti, of 98 Templeton avenue, was pleasantly surprised on last Saturday evening by several of his friends in honor of his nineteenth birthday. He had planned to attend El Capitan Theatre on Mission street, and on arriving there to his great surprise found twenty-five of his friends waiting to greet him. Instead of attending the show, they all motored to the Viotti home, where they spent the evening dancing in the social hall. Darrell De Martini furnished the music for dancing on his accordian. At midnight a buffet supper was served to the following guests: Misses Lita Williams, Evelyn Hanschen, Esther Vireno, Mabel Vireno, Florence Arbinelli, Clara Arbinelli, Eva Menconi and Lena Menconi; Messrs. Le Roy Giornoni, Elmo Viotti, Louis Menconi, Joe Menconi, John Zamb, George Fuerst, Frank O'Connell, Girard Rose, Andrew Vireno, John Mussolino, Darrell De Martini, Mr. and Mrs. E. De Martini, Mrs. A. Menconi and Mr. and Mrs. J. Viotti.

VISTA GRANDE CIRCLE INSTALLS OFFICERS

Vista Grande Circle No. 252, Order Companion of Forresters, held their installation of officers at Masonic Hall last Wednesday evening. The following were installed by Deputy Mrs. L. Pezzola: Past Chief Companion, Mrs. C. Hume; Chief Companion, Mrs. H. Hutchings; Sub-Chief Companion, Mrs. S. G. Bryant; Financial Secretary, Mrs. A. Parker; Recording Secretary, Mrs. E. Hart; Treasurer, Ms. L. Lenhares; Right Guide, Mrs. J. Daugherty; Left Guide, Mrs. J. Dillon; Inner Guard, Mrs. J. Johnson; Outer Guard, Miss Sullivan; Marshal, Mrs. R. Neuman; Flag Bearer, Mrs. J. Thompson; Organist, Mrs. L. Johnson.

Many visitors were present and after the installation dainty refreshments were served in the banquet hall.

CALVARY BAPTIST MISSION

We are now in our new building, 5724 Mission street. It is God's house and is open to all who come. The Baptist Young Peoples' Union meet every Sunday at 6:30 p. m., and they have some wonderful programs. They are starting a new contest next Sunday evening, and many good times are expected. They are a fine group of girls and boys, a credit to the church and the community. Come and join them. They will make you feel at home. New officers just installed are: President, R. K. Camp; Vice-President, G. Davis; Secretary, Pricella Williams; Treasurer, John Thornhill; Contest Captains, Pearl Davis, Side No. 1; Irving Sorg, Side No. 2; Song Leader, A. C. Mintz; Editor of Pep, Irving Sorg; Entertainment Committee, Mrs. A. C. Mintz and Miss V. Thornhill; Chairman of Advertising Committee, A. O. Tucker.

GENERAL ACTIVITIES ON MISSION STREET

Whether it is a forerunner of the year's prosperity, or whether it is just the general spring activity making its appearance ahead of time, the business section of our community is making rapid strides within the last few weeks.

William Haerdter, of the Relish, is converting his latest purchase into a modern, up to the minute building, and is to be complimented on the fine apearance his corner is assuming.

J. T. Shannon is also making vast improvements in his store front at this time, which is all conducive to enlarging the business section of Daly City, and a new store and apartment building is to be erected shortly directly adjoining the office of the Community Realty Company.

We are indeed glad to note all these improvements, and heartily congratulate those who are responsible for them. Daly City is forging ahead and has gotten off to a splendid start for the new year.

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Next Sunday is the last day in the contest between the Hustlers and the Rustlers in the Sunday school—unless there is a tie. Let's make it a record-breaker for genuine interest and enthusiasm, as well as attendance, and surpass last Sunday's record of 126 present. Be on time, 11 a. m.

Junior C. E. is at 11:10. The society is showing fine growth.

Next Sunday is Young People's day in our nation-wide church. We should have a large attendance and a special program at the Christian Endeaver meeting at 7 p. m.

The regular church service is at 8 p. m., with a message by the pastor. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Rev. C. L. Duncan, director of religious education for Northern California, was the guest and speaker at the Sunday school council meeting last Wednesday evening. He gave an interesting and suggestive talk on methods and objectives in Sunday school work. Mr. Duncan was one of the early pastors of Grace Presbyterian church, before it moved to its present site. The meeting was largely attended.

BAY SHORE ROAD TO BE EXTENDED

Assurance that Bay Shore boulevard will be extended from San Mateo to Redwood City during 1929 was given by Colonel John H. Skeggs, district engineer of the division of highways, to members of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon meeting last Monday.

The Bay Shore unit from Redwood City to Palo Alto will not be started this year, however, according to the district engineer.

Following a new policy, all future roads started by the highway division will be completed at one time for through traffic, instead of finishing a joint here and there and leaving gaps in between, as in the case of the Bay Shore boulevard, declared Colonel Skeggs.

OFFICERS IN SEARCH OF WANDERING BOY

Deputies from the sheriff's office at Redwood City have been hunting for John Kerwin, aged 15, of San Francisco, who for the past two months has been known to be rambling up and down the peninsula, sleeping in empty barns and houses. He was most recently seen Monday afternoon on the state highway near Colma, walking south in company with a little black dog. The boy is noticeably lame in his left foot, is about 5 feet tall, weighs about 100 pounds, has blue eyes and a light complexion.

SEEKING PAYROLLS FOR THE PENINSULA

Representatives of every Chamber of Commerce in San Mateo county have been extended an invitation by the industrial committee of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce to attend a San Mateo county industrial conference at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, San Mateo, on February 5. Plans will then be formulated, it is expected, to make an industrial survey of the county so that it may act as a unit in inviting industries to locate in San Mateo county.

The industrial committee of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce met last Monday night to map plans for industrial development east of the Southern Pacific lines.

"We need industrial development to lower taxes," said John J. McGrath, member of the committee. "In the past we have expended all our efforts in inviting home seekers, but we now realize that the small bungalow tax is not sufficient to pay for our schools, street improvements and sewers.

"When a new resident of moderate circumstances moves on the Peninsula his taxes on the home he buys are not adequate to take care of the cost of sending his children to school or to take care of improvements. Industrial development will increase payrolls, thus increasing business and wealth in the communities.

"Most of the cities in the county are at present commuting cities, and money earned is spent elsewhere, probably not more than 40 per cent spent in San Mateo county. We need industries as well as home seekers. The thousands of acres of idle industrial lands fronting the bay are not suitable for any development but industrial. It is time the county organized to act as a unit in inviting industries to locate here."

Fred J. Mahr, industrial representative of the San Francisco and San Jose divisions of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, and a member of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce, stressed the fact that industries are locating across the bay, due to organized effort.

"We must work to get just one basic industry here," said Mahr, "and the rest will follow. I believe that one of the greatest developments would be the establishment of an industrial airport in this vicinity. With the county organized to act as a whole we can really get somewhere."

RANCHER IS STRUCK DOWN ON HIGHWAY

Luigi Gregori, aged 45, well to do rancher of Baden Crossing, died at Mills Memorial hospital at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning, after he had been struck by an automobile on the highway near Baden shortly after 1 o'clock that morning. He was on his way home at the time of the accident. C. E. Burr, of Los Angeles, soon after called at the San Mateo police department and signed a statement admitting that his machine had struck Gregori. He told police that Gregori had walked directly in front of his car and that the accident was unavoidable. He was not detained.

AIRPORT MAY BE LOCATED IN HEART OF SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco may have a centrally located airport within five minute's walking distance of the down town section, if plans made public by Postmaster H. L. Todd materialize. Todd said engineers are investigating the project, which calls for the erection of a mammoth platform over the Southern Pacific yards. The platform would be mort than 3,500 feet in length and 2,000 feet in width. Todd said eastern capital was ready to finance the plan if approval of the railroad company is obtained.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Faced for some time with the problem of providing an adequate municipal building for Redwood City which would take care of the increase in official business, the city council has instructed architects to draw up two sets of plans, one for construction of a new city hall at a new location, and another for remodeling and making additions to the preesnt building.

Edith Branson and her minor daughter Barbara have filed suit for $100,000 damages against Mary F. McTigue, San Jose school teacher, and her mother, Mrs. P. McTigue, following an automobile crash early New Year's morning, which resulted in the death of Edward Branson.

Burlingame's new city jail will be located in the old post office building on Lorton avenue, and will be opened as soon as cells can be built there, according to a vote of the city council.

The San Mateo County Good Government League will take an active part in San Mateo's coming municipal election, it was announced by leaders of the league, following a conference.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Johnson, aged 84, of Belmont, died Sunday at the St. Francis hospital, San Francisco, from injuries suffered when she fell at the home of her daughter in San Francisco on January 2.

One dollar a mile and suspension of his driving license was the fine imposed on M. S. Ferrando, of Redwood City, arrested on a charge of reckless driving. Ferrando was driving 65 miles an hour.

The Peninsula Paving Company won the contract to pave the San Mateo Homestead district west of El Camino Real, on a bid of $123,440, the lowest among eleven bids submitted to the San Mateo city council.

A lone burglar, using a crude iron to pry off the dial, opened the safe in the office of the United States laundry at Beresford, Saturday night, and escaped with over $200 in checks and money.

Mrs. Oliver Stevens was fatally injured, and G. A. Strolmaier seriously injured as the result of an automobile collision on the San Jose-Los Gatos road. Strolmaier's machine collided with a car driven by W. R. Grassle, of San Francisco, who may face manslaughter charges.

The secretary of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce estimates that the population of San Francisco on January 1, 1929, was 756,188.

Elimination of billboards and roadside sandwich stands is planned by the Redwood Empire Association as part of a campaign to beautify highways. An inter-county regional planning commission will take over the work in the nine counties comprising the association, it is announced.

The Pacific Coast Savings, Building Loan Conference will hold its seventh annual meeting in San Francisco on February 11 and 12. About 400 delegates will attend, coming from California, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico, British Columbia, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Wyoming, and Nevada.

San Francisco is one of four cities in the United States that enjoys a 5-cent street car fare, and shares only with New York the privilege of free transfers as well. The other two cities having 5-cent fare, Newark, N. J., and Jersey City, have no transfer privileges.

With the backing of Governor C. C. Young, the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge bill, providing for its construction by the state, has been introduced in the legislature.

Men, women and children aggregating more than 160,000 received kindly ministrations by Community Chest agencies of San Francisco in 1928, according to a compilation made by the Department of Social Work.

Giving recognition to San Francisco as the chief fur distributing center of the West, the first Western conference of the National Association of the Fur Industry to be held there will take place during May, it is announced by the San Francisco Convention Bureau.

Paul F. McConnell, civil engineer, died Tuesday from injuries received in a Saturday night auto mishap in Los Angeles, making the street death total forty-seven in the first twenty days of this year in that city.

Spectographic observations of the planet Neptune, made at the Lick Observatory of the University of California, have settled definitely that this planet is rotating on its axis in the same direction as the earth, according to the annual report of President W. W. Campbell to Governor Young, just published.

Clarence J. Stafford has been selected president of the newly organized Salada Beach Chamber of Commerce. The other officers are Walter Freyer, first vice-president; Archibald Craig, second vice-president, and J. E. Davies, secretary-treasurer.

Carl Strand, a painter living at Burlingame, is held prisoner in the city jail in lieu of $1,000 cash bail, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

COUNTY FINANCES IN HEALTHY CONDITION

The San Mateo county board of supervisors was told that San Mateo county was ready to bank $800,000, the biggest surplus in the history of the county, when County Treasurer Grace L. Cooper was granted permission last Monday to advertise for bids to deposit that amount.

The total on hand in the treasurer's office is over $1,700,000, largely from the November and December income on county taxes, but containing incomes from all sources. The balance of the above surplus, amounting to $900,000, is now in form of certificates of deposit.

County Treasurer Cooper was also granted authority to transfer part of the $900,000 to other county funds that are now low or will be low within the next few months. The second tax installment in April is expected to recompensate the main fund for these transfers.

The county treasurer characterized the county's financial condition as "very healthy," and simply a sign that official business at Redwood City was growing by leaps and bounds.

Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown made the motion to advertise to deposit, and it was seconded by Supervisor Manuel Francis.

The protest of E. Maffi, owner of the Peninsula Pump and Supply Company, and the Market Street Railway Company of San Francisco, over property assessments for paving of streets in Lomita Park, were overruled by the board. The railway company claimed a difference of several thousand dollars in true assessment in a letter addressed to the board a week previous. The supervisors voted to confirm the present assessment.

A petition for streets, sidewalks, and electroliers along El Camino Real, water mains and hydrants in Blossom Heath, a subdivision immediately adjoining the Homestead district of San Mateo, was filed with the board. Plans and specifications have already been drawn up by County Engineer George A. Kneese and City Attorney J. E. McCurdy of San Mateo. This district would be included in the proposed Beresford annexation by San Mateo.

The long sought street work in Beresford, through a petition by residents of the community, was finally referred to the county engineer for plans and specifications.

A map of Burlingame Hills subdivision was filed for acceptance, and the streets of the district were officially dedicated for public use in a notice by the board.

A deed to a portion of land over which the new Redwood Memorial Park will run was reported settled, and the abandonment of two roads in the southern part of the county was asked in a petition filed by L. C. Hammond of Ravenswood.

CALIFORNIA FOURTH IN SAVINGS DEPOSITS

"Banking statistics for the United States show California ranking fourth in total savings deposits," said Will C. Wood, Superintendent of Banks, commenting on the latest figures released by the Comptroller of Currency in the State Banking Department Bulletin for January.

California is exceeded only by New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in this regard. Further comparison brings out the fact that California stands only fifth from the top in point of bank resources and individual deposits, and sixth in total capital, surplus and undivided profits.

Entertains Sisterhood Members

One of Daly City's prominent club women, Mrs. W. D. Priest, entertained twenty-five members of the Orrillia Sisterhood at a beautiful luncheon at her home, 207 Park avenue, last Monday. Many of the ladies were visitors from out of town, some coming from as far as Santa Cruz. After a delightful repast, talks by some of the members and musical numbers occupid the afternoon, and the ladies reported a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment.

MAY PURCHASE BANK STOCK ON MONTHLY INSTALLMENT PLAN

Transamerica Corporation, the new billion dollar organization created to acquire ownership of the Bank of Italy and related companies, has announced a plan that will permit the purchase of tis stock on a monthly payment basis, at $130 per share.

The proposal limits the number of shares that may be purchased by one person to twenty-five, and provides for an initial payment of $10 per share, with subsequent monthly installments of $5 per share for twenty-four months. Purchasers are not permitted to pay up in advance, nor will the stock be delivered until the expiration of the two year purchase period.

No interest will be charged on the deferred balances, but the dividends will not be paid to the installment purchasers until the termination of the contract. Stock dividends, should any be declared, will, however, accrue to the benefit of the purchaser. The price at which the stock is being offered is slightly below the current market quotation.

January 31 has been fixed as the ultimate date beyond which the plan will not be extended, though it is not definitely determined that it will be held open that long. The shares being offered represent the holdings of Bancitaly Corporation in Bank of Italy, the stock having been exchanged for that of Transamerica.

VETERAN SWITCHBOARD GETS WELL EARNED REST

After twenty-seven years of service the pioneer telephone switchboard of the police department in Washington, D. C., has been honorably retired. The board was installed when the tape system of receiving reports from patrol boxes was abandoned, and during its twenty-seven years of existence it is estimated that it has received more than a million calls, including the first intimation of some of the famous crimes in the history of the city. This old board had a code of numbers which popped into view, instead of the modern lights on modern switchboards. It is to be replaced by a new board thoroughly modern and having twice the capacity of the old one.

An 82-year-old man had to pay $1 for alienating the affections of another man wife. Perhaps the judge thought a fellow that old couldn't alienate more than a dollar's worth.

A FAMOUS QUILT

There was recently received at the Alabama department of archives and history in Montgomery one of the most famous quilts in the world, which will find there its permanent resting place.

It is the quilt made by Confederate women during the Civil war to be auctioned for the benefit of the fund for the building of the noted warship Alabama, which caused the Federals a lot of trouble before she was finally sunk on June 19, 1864, by the Kearsarge, off Cherbourg, France.

After the quilt was made it was put up at auction, and time and again the lucky bidder would donate it to the cause, to be auctioned again. Thus it passed through many hands, and from it was realized much of the money for the purchase of the ship. It finally came into possession of the family of Mrs. Mary Hutchinson Owens, who has just presented it to the state as a memento of the "Lost Cause."

The Alabama was commanded by the intrepid Rafael Semmes, and during her eventful career of two years captured one Federal steamer and no less than sixty-seven sailing vessels, besides causing the transfer of 348 Federal ships to the British flag. Her destruction by the Kearsarge, commanded by Captain Winslow was a great relief to the Federal forces.

The Alabama went to the bottom of the sea, the Kearsarge was destroyed long after the war by being wrecked on a Carribean reef in 1894, but the Alabama's quilt, wrought by loving hands in what they considered a sacred cause, is preserved for posterity in the cradle of the Confederacy.

ANOTHER DOG HERO

From Germany comes a well authenticated press story concerning the rescue of two boys from the icy water of the Danube river by a hunting dog's intelligence and heroism.

While skating, the children broke through the ice and cried for help. A hunter who happened to be nearby commanded his dog to go after them. After five plunges the animal caught the clothing of one child and dragged him ashore, immediately returning for the second, who had drifted under the ice. After a great struggle, he, too, was brought out by the dog, which then collapsed.

Resuscitation was employed to finish the life-saving procedure, and two more human beings were indebted to a dog for saving them from death. Still, some people argue that an animal can't think.

U. C. LECTURER LAUDS COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS AS ADVERTISING MEDIA

Newspaper advertising in community newspapers, or local newspapers, leads all media open to the community business man, according to Prof. Royal A. Roberts, economist and lecturer for the University Extension Division.

Professor Roberts is opening a newly organized section of a course in "small store management" in which advertising for community businesses will be discussed. The first meeting was held Wednesday evening, January 16, at 7 o'clock, at the University Extension building, 540 Powell street, San Francisco.

"Advertising through local newspapers gives the business man the least expesive means of calling attention to his business and his merchandise," Professor Roberts points out. "While he may also use dodgers, which are perhaps second in importance, his local contacts through clubs and other organizations, the mails or the telephone, to acquaint his customers with sales events, his newspaper advertising is as important to him as are his window displays."

TELEPHONE PROVES AN AID IN THE RESCUE OF MINERS

When more than 200 men were entombed in a mine at Mather, Penn., the mine telephone system helped greatly in the work of rescue, and to those who had temporarily escaped the deadly gas this telephone line carried a note of hopefulness and cheer which meant a great deal to the men who were beckoning for their lives. Ultimately sixty-three lives were saved in this disaster, and if it had not been for the mine telephone system, the workers above might not have been able to reach even these in time.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

WHEREAS, L. G. EMERSON, a single person, did heretofore, to-wit, on the 15th day of July, 1926, make, execute and deliver his certain deed of trust, bearing date the 15th day of July, 1926, to the CITY TITLE INSURANCE COMPANY, a corporation, as trustee, for the benefit and security of ALBERT OBERFELD and PAUL MESSNER, which said deed of trust was thereafter, or on the 10th day of August, 1926, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, in Liber 1324 of Official Records, at page 243, and also recorded on the 17th day of July 1926, in the office of the County Clerk and Recorder of San Mateo County, State of California, in Volume 245 of Deeds of Official Records, at page 192, and which said deed of trust was made, executed and delivered to secure the faithful performance of all obligations contained in said deed of trust and to secure the payment of a certain promissory note, of even date with said deed of trust, in the principal sum of one thousand ($1,000) dollars, made, executed and delivered by the said L. G. Emerson, according to the terms thereof, and for that purpose conveyed to the said trustee the following described real property, situate in the City and County of San Francisco and the County of San Mateo, all in the State of California, to-wit:

Lots Numbers twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) in Block "M," as designated and laid out on a certain map of land of the Mission Street Land Company and filed July 26, 1895, and recorded in Map Book No. 1, at pages 195 and 196, records of the office of the County Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and also that certain lot of land, situate in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, and described as follows:

The RED LAMP

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary, Gordon, takes possession. A youth, Carroway, on watch for the sheep killer, disappears. Porter has the red lamp hidden in a room of which he alone has the key, but many people, including the professor himself, believe they have seen its reflection at Twin Hollows. Halliday is mysteriously attacked and seriously injured. Carroway is found in the bay, murdered.

There is, I understand, no definite engagement between them.

I must not forget to enter that Halliday last night believes he saw the red lamp burning, in the den behind the library of the main house. He told me the details this morning as he waited for Edith to don my overalls.

It was his first night, after his accident, at the boathouse, and he could not sleep.

"I had a good bit of pain," he said, "and at one o'clock I got up and went outside. There was a sort of dull red light coming from the windows of the library of the other house, and I watched it for awhile. It was extremely faint, and at first I thought it might be a fire; then, as it didn't grow any, I saw it must be a light of some sort."

He knew the stories of the red lamp, but he also knew I had locked it away, so after a time he started up toward the house. He was about half way up the lawn when it went out, suddenly, and left him staring.

But he was curious, and he went on. He made a complete circuit of the building, but there was no movement or sound from within, and so he turned and went back again. He believes the light was in the den, not the library, for he saw only a diffused reddish glare, as though it came from behind. He could not, through any of the three long French windows which open onto the terrace, see the source of that glare.

Here, then, is corroboration of my own impression of some few nights ago, but with a difference. For I saw the light itself, a momentary flash as though a breeze had for an instant pushed open the heavy curtains at the den windows, and then had let them fall again.

I am convinced that young Gordon has never seen the light, or he would have spoken of it. He is fluent enough about what he calls the "spooky" quality of the house. It is unlikely that Mr. Bethel, imprisoned in his upper room, can have any knowledge of it. Yet here we have two dispassionate observers, seeing at different times and under different circumstances, a light apparently of spontaneous origin and no known cause.

July 19.

A sudden and terrifying storm outside. Above the howling of the wind I can hear the surf beating against the shore. Halliday reports, over the telephone, that the float is in danger and that the runway has broken loose. But there is nothing to do. I have just been out, and I do not propose to be soaked again.

(Note: The approach of the storm had made Jane very nervous, and I had driven in to Doctor Hayward's for a sleeping medicine for her.)

Jock is as bad as Jane, and should have a narcotic also! He is moving uneasily from place to place, now and then emitting a dismal howl, and Clara is sitting forlornly at the foot of the staircase, under the impression that it is the only place free from metal in the house, and thus less likely to attract the lightning.

It is indeed a night for dark deeds. And for dark thoughts. . . .

I wonder if I have any justification for my suspicions? Why should Hayward, preparing to go out to an obstetric case, start me along a new and probably unjustified line of thought? Surely, of all men in the world, he has the best right to carry ether. I must be careful not to do as Greenough has done, allow my necessity for finding the guilty man to run away with my judgment.

And yet, in spite of myself, I cannot help feeling that Hayward fulfills many of the requirements. He alone, of all the people hereabout, is free to move about the country at night without suspicion. He knew Uncle Horace "as well as anybody." He is—and God forgive me if I am wrong—enough of a sailor to know and use the half-hitch.

There are other points, also. He is about my age, if anything older, but he is a muscular man. And he is, like all general practitioners in the country, by way of being a surgeon also. He would know how to find the jugular vein of a sheep. . . .

"In all earnestness I appeal to you to consider the enormity of the lead," wrote poor old Horace, more than a year ago. But while killing sheep is unpleasant, even sad, there is no particular enormity in it. I pass by a leg of spring-time lamb without considering that a tragedy lies behind it. The murder of Carroway, too, cannot come under the strictures of that letter; it was done as a matter of protection.

Nearest of all to the possibilities suggested by the letter comes the attack on Halliday, and if the sheep-killer did that, why not have put his devilish symbol on the car during that silent ride of a mile before he prepared to strike?

Why have crept in later and done it?

But here again—the doctor had access to the car, after Greenough had examined it. He went in alone, according to Clara, and was there some time.

Was it, then, the doctor's typewriter which wrote the cipher over which Halliday has been puzzling? The GeLTr, K. 28?

July 20.

Maggie Morrison disappeared last night; disappeared as completely as though she had been wiped from the face of the earth by the storm.

Livingstone telephoned me the facts at seven this morning, and Halliday and I took the car and went over. We have been out with the searching party all day, but without result.

Tonight the search is still going on. Starr has sworn in more deputies, and the entire countryside is aroused.

Jane has been ill all day, and has kept her bed.

July 21.

No trace of the unfortunate girl tonight, and all hope of finding her alive is slowly being abandoned. . . .

I can now record such facts as we know, relative to the mystery.

The girl went in to Oakville yesterday to do some shopping, and remained for dinner with Thomas and his wife. In spite of Thomas' prophecy of a storm she insisted on staying over for a moving picture, and it was therefore ten-thirty when, alone in the farm truck, she started out of town.

Nothing more is known of her movements, save that she got as far as the Hilburn road, about two hundred yards beyond the Livingstones' gate. The truck was found there yesterday morning at daylight by an early laborer on the Morrison farm, who, however, thought that she had abandoned it there during the storm the night before, and neglected to report it.

At the farm house itself there was no uneasiness, as the family supposed the girl remained in town. But when the hour came for her to start with her milk delivery, and she had not arrived, inquiries were set on foot.

The truck shows no signs of any struggle, and that robbery was not the motive of whatever has happened is shown by the fact that the missing girl's pocketbook was found behind the seat of the truck, where she usually placed it.

Greenough and the sheriff were on the ground when we got there, as well as a small knot of country folk, kept at a distance by a deputy or two, and already a small posse, hastily recruited, was beating the wood nearby. Such clews as there may have been, however, had been obliterated by the storm. There is no trace of the dreaded symbol in chalk. . . .

Halliday has reconstructed the story, in view of his own experience.

"The fellow was waiting," he said, "and hailed her, as he hailed me. He knew nobody would pass a man caught out in a storm like that. He got in, and closed the storm curtains, and of course she hadn't a chance in the world."

Possibly five hundred men and boys have been searching steadily since yesterday morning; the back country, where it happened, is fairly open; the sea, with its salt marshes, both of which would give unlimited opportunity for concealment, is fully six miles by road from where the truck was found. . . .

Much talk is going around as to a story from the lighthouse on the extreme tip of Robinson's point today. As is to be expected, the superstitious are making considerable capital of it. And I myself am not disposed to dismiss it without considerable thought.

The story is as follows:

On the night of the tragedy, a flying night bird of some sort broke one of those windows of the lighthouse which protect the light itself. The keeper and the second keeper repaired it as best they could, but the terrific gusts of the wind made them uneasy, and they remained on watch.

They sat, high in the air, in the room just beneath the light, now and then glancing up to see that all was well. The storm increased in violence and as the sea came up the surf beat on the rocks below with a crashing only equaled by the thunder itself. As is usual in the high tide of the full moon, the low portion of the point to landward, and the keeper's houses, the engine shed, boathouse and oil storage tank were soon cut off from the mainland by a strip of angry ocean.

Nevertheless, they were comfortable enough, and the under-keeper had actually fallen asleep, at eleven o'clock, when there came a sudden lull in the storm. It was that time, which I well remember, when there came one of those ominous and quivering pauses in the attack which seem, not a promise of peace, but a gathering together of all the powers of wind, sea and sky for one final and tremendous effort.

And in that pause Ward, the light-keeper, heard something below in the tower. He touched his assistant on the shoulder and he sat up. Both of them then distinctly heard footsteps on the lowest flight of stairs, five floors below.

They were alone in the tower; cut off from the mainland by a rushing strip of tide, and no boat could have landed through the surf. And outside was that unearthly quiet which was more sinister than the storm itself.

Neither One of Them Moved or Spoke.

Neither one of them moved or spoke, but the keeper remembers that, as the steps came on inexorably, a cold air began to eddy around the small circular room, and that he looked up at the red light apprehensively.

At the top of the second flight the steps paused, and both keepers drew a breath. Then they heard a small dry cough, and the steps recommenced on the third level.

Up and up. The stairs curved round the inside wall of the tower, and they knew they would not see what was climbing until it was fairly on them. They sat there, their eyes glued to the door, and heard the steps coming up the last round. Whatever it was, it was on them. It reached the top, and the next step would bring it into view.

Then the storm burst again, in an explosion that fairly set the tower rocking, and simultaneously the electric lights in the room went out.

It was then that the assistant keeper swears that something touched him; something cold; but there seems to be no doubt, whether that is true or not, that the whole room was filled with the cold eddying wind referred to before.

I prefer to trust the head-keeper's statement. Ward is an unemotional type, and this is what he says:

"I was scared enough, but when the lights went out I looked up at the lamp. It's an oil burner, and it was all right. Old Faithful, we call it. Well, you have to understand that we weren't entirely in the dark, even then; some of the red light from above came down, and I could see where Jim was standing. I couldn't see him, y'understand, but I could see where he was. And there was a third party in the room, over near the stair-door. That is, he was there one minute; the next he was gone."

Keeping close together the two men went down through the successive floors of the tower. They found nothing, and the outer door was still closed and bolted.

In view of so detailed and corroborative a statement, the final support of my early skepticism has had a severe blow. . . .

What would be the change, should we enter another world, with the same faculties we have now, but no limitations in their use? To sorrow, to love, even perhaps to hate. And who shall laugh at the poor ghost who, knowing and suffering all things, makes its desperate attempt to avert a wickedness? To convey, through the thick mantle of the flesh, a knowledge that is not conveyance. To stand by, wringing its pale amorphous hands, while crimes go on and unnecessary wretchedness inhabits the earth?

Nothing bodily accounts for personality. Back of everything physical, and greater than anything physical, is the mind. And mind is not an attribute of matter.

July 22.

The body has not been found, and the sheriff has raised the reward to five thousand dollars. This with Livingstone's original five hundred for the sheep-killer, which is to go to the finder of the murderer as being in all probability the same individual, raises the reward to fifty-five hundred dollars.

Today, however, certain information acquired by Halliday has shifted the scene of the search to the salt marshes and the bay, and tonight, as I glance from my window I can see lanterns moving in the marsh beyond the main house, and up and down the shore. Jane has made coffee, and those of the searchers who come up this way from the beach have been stopping in.

Halliday's discovery, made today, is as follows: He calculated just how far the truck would have to go after it was hailed, before it stopped, and went back to that point, which was not far from the entrance to the Livingstone drive. Already the crowd of searchers and sensation hunters had pretty well destroyed any clew that might have been left, but about twenty yards from the gates he found marks in the mud indicating that, not only had the truck been backed to that point, but it had been turned there and headed back toward Oakville and the bay.

Just where it left the road again, if at all, is a question. I believe Halliday has taken a scraping from the wheels and proposes to have it analyzed. He finds something suspicious in it. I cannot say what.

I have spent today reorganizing my household. None of the women, including Clara, are to leave it after nightfall unaccompanied, and although no entrance into any house has yet been attempted, Halliday and I have spent the late afternoon tightening window locks and adding new bolts where they are necessary.

Jane has entirely recovered, and has today resumed work on her tapestry, with us a barometer of normality. She has even agreed to dine at the Livingstones tonight, not particularly to my delight.

"Come over and dine," Mrs. Livingstone telephoned, "and let's have a little bridge. I've had the horrors for three days."

"You don't object to my wearing my revolver, as a part of my evening outfit?"

"Everybody's doing it," she said. "This house has been turned into an arsenal."

Later: Doctor Hayward stopped in this evening for a final professional visit to Jane, and on an impulse I showed him Uncle Horace's letter. I may be mistaken, but it seemed to me that, under pretense of reading it a second time, he was playing for time.

"Curious!" he said, when he passed it back to me. "What do you make of it?"

"The last part of it is fairly clear. He was in danger, and knew it."

"But the rest of it?" he said. "What does he say? The wickedness of the idea. What idea?"

"You haven't any opinion on that yourself?"

"No," he said slowly. "I can't say that I have."

The tension, or whatever it was, seemed to relax then. "As a mater of fact," he said, "I thought it was addressed to me, when I commenced it. We'd had a long argument not long before his death, on euthanasia. I believed in putting the unfit out of the world; he didn't. But of course the end of it settles that."

He laughed again, bit the end of a thumb, hesitated, and then got his hat.

"Danger!" he said. "And the police! No, that wasn't for me."

"And you still believe he died of heart disease?"

"It was his heart, all right," he said, and going out, climbed heavily into his car. He seemed abstracted, and made no reply to my good-night.

I can read into this what I like. His manner was not that of a guilty man; on the other hand, it was not entirely natural, either. He was both watchful and self-conscious. And I do not believe he read the letter twice. . . .

One of the evening newspapers tonight prints a photostatic copy of the cipher found in our garage, and offers a prize for its solution.

Edith's memory is shown to have been faulty in only one particular. The cipher, as published reads:

GeLTr, K. 24.

July 23.

Mrs. Livingstone has given me something to think about. . . .

The dinner went off very well. But the bridge was irritating. It is always a mistake to seat four people at a table, and place cards before them, when their minds are full of another and totally different matter.

Nevertheless, the evening was not without a peculiar interest of its own. While Mr. Livingstone took Jane to see his hothouses I had a few moments alone with his wife, and I received what is to me a new angle on the whole mysterious business.

We were in the library, and I was wandering around looking at Livingstone's books. In one corner was a large and well-worn collection of books on psychic subjects, and as I glanced up from them Mrs. Livingstone was watching me, gravely.

"If you do not know what you believe on these matters," I said, "you must certainly know the opinions of others."

"And you?" she said. "Are you still a cynic?"

I turned and faced her.

"I don't know what I am."

"Ah! You have heard the lighthouse story?"

"Yes."

She said nothing for a moment, then:

"What about your new tenant? Your Mr. Bethel? Has he made any complaint?"

"Not yet. As a matter of fact I have talked to him only once."

"And that was—?"

"Mostly about hot water and a beef cube," I admitted. "And the direction in which the house faces. He struck me as an extremely irritable and material type."

"'Irritable and material,'" she repeated thoughtfully. "And yet I suppose you know they are saying that he is using the red lamp."

"It is locked in a closet on the upper floor, Mrs. Livingstone, and I have the key. What is more, I heard that story some time ago, and investigated. So far as I can tell, it has not been disturbed since I put it there. Of course, he may have brought another similar lamp, but that's going rather far, isn't it?"

She picked up some knitting at her elbow and worked at it thoughtfully.

"You have changed since I last talked to you," she said at last, "What has brought about that change, Mr. Porter?"

"A good bit has happened since then."

She looked up at me searchingly.

"Including the lighthouse."

"Including the lighthouse," I agreed, soberly. It was then she put down her knitting.

"Why has he come back?" she asked, watching me intently. "Why is he earth-bound? Have you no idea?"

"I haven't an idea what you mean by earth-bound."

"Just what I appear to mean, and you know it," she said. "You can laugh if you like; Liv does. But I know what I know. There is always a reason when they come back like this. A very good reason."

But beyond that she refused to go. Whether she has an inkling of this "reason" to which she attributes what she refers to as his "coming back" I have no idea.

July 24.

The truck, according to Halliday's analysis, had been driven through heavy leaf mold. But a second drenching rain toward morning, and still continuing, discourages him. Into the bargain, the cars of searchers and summer tourists alike have made it practically impossible to identify any trail.

He has given his information and the result of the report to Greenough, but that gentleman appears to think he requires no assistance.

Cannon Made of Wood Used in West Indies

Any one familiar with the construction of modern weapons of warfare and the high explosives used in them would naturally suppose a cannon made of wood would be of little or no value as a weapon. But wooden cannon have been used with considerable success in revolutionary movements in Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican republic.

The wood used in the construction of these crude weapons was a very tough variety, having a twisted grain that curled about the log in such a way that to split the timber with ordinary means was almost impossible. The best trees were selected, and a piece of the log 5 or 6 feet in length and about 1 foot in diameter was cut. After the bark had been removed and the log made perfectly round, it was swung up on a crude truss and a hole was burned into it from one end. The log was wound with strips of rawhide. When the cannon was covered with the strips of hide, another layer was wound on and this was continued until the weapon had increased several inches in diameter.

After the log was covered and the bore was finished, the weapon was treated to a hot draft, which tended to contract the hide binding.

Riveting Necessary

The railroads of the United States, which are famous the world over for their speed and safety, use riveted equipment. Only riveted steel can stand the strain of hurtling tens of thousands of miles at breakneck speed. Bridges that bear hundreds of thousands of tons of weight and withstand extremes of hot and cold weather, of snow and storm, are built of riveted steel.

Hessians in Revolution

"Hessians" is a term in American history for the German conscripts who were hired and sent over by England to help subdue the revolting Colonists. They came from six of the small states of Germany, but as over half of them were from Hesse-Cassel and Hesse-Darmstadt, the name "Hessians" was generally applied to them. They were first commanded by Lieut. Gen. Philipp von Heister, but he was succeeded by Wilhelm von Knyphausen in 1777. They took a prominent part in the battles of Long Island, White Plains, Trenton, Bennington, Brandywine, Germantown, Guilford courthouse, Yorktown and several other smaller engagements. Of the approximate 30,000 who came over to America, only 17,000 returned to Germany. About 2,200 were killed outright or died of their wounds.

A MAN Works on His STOMACH

A HUNDRED years ago Napoleon said: "An army marches on its stomach." Today it is also true that a man works on his stomach! Your stomach must be regular if you are to work at your highest efficiency. You can make it so with PE-RU-NA—for over half a century the World's Greatest Stomach Remedy. PE-RU-NA tones the stomach, and removes that congested, catarrhal feeling which adds years to your age and robs you of your vitality. Your druggist has PE-RU-NA—buy a bottle of this famous remedy and begin to enjoy its beneficial effects today!

Ancient Norse Poets

The word "skald" (one of the Norse poets who in primitive times recited long compositions in verse, usually in honor of the great and famous) comes from the old Norse "Skald," meaning "poet." They were minstrels of a high order, often attached to the court. The earliest of these skalds was the mythical "Starkadh, the old." The following are among the most famous of his successors: Thjodolf, author of "Ynglingatal," and Thorbjorn, the minstrel and author of "Haraldsmal." Both of these flourished at the end of the Ninth century at the court of Harold of the Bright Hair. In the Tenth century lived the Norwegian skald Eyvind, who sang the exploits of the famous Hakonarmal, and the Icelander Egil, who gave his name to the Egils Saga. The last of the skalds was Skurla, who died in 1284.

Hen Hatches 'Gators

Henry Crawford, a negro at Kinston, N. C., is exhibiting four baby alligators which he said were hatched by a hen on a farm near there. The 'gators are about five inches long. Crawford said he found an alligator's nest in Pamlico county several weeks ago. He brought a number of the eggs home with him and placed them, together with chicken eggs, under the hen. The chicken eggs failed to hatch, but the little 'gators seemed to appease the hen.

Keep Blankets Like New!

To keep blankets fresh and sweet always wash them with 20 Mule Team Borax and a mild soap. Avoid strong alkalis and harsh "washing compounds." A final Borax rinse leaves them soft and fluffy.—Adv.

PROTECT YOUR BABIES

Influenza Threatens

Children's coughs and colds are serious. You can't tell by the start of a cold how serious it is going to be. Even doctors and trained nurses cannot distinguish the early stages of flu from a bad cold.

Don't take chances. At the first sign of a cough or cold start with Glessco. Don't wait an hour! Three generations of mothers have put their trust in Glessco. It relieves the cough and breaks a cold right up. It puts a sick, croupy child back on its feet before more serious trouble has a chance to develop.

Every time you break a cold with Glessco you know that's one cold that won't develop into flu! All druggists and most general stores have Glessco.

THE STOREKEEPERS

Those of us who are past middle age can remember when the kindly neighbor whose job it was to sell us the necessities of life was known as a storekeeper. The name was quite appropriate. He bought a stock of goods, hung out his sign, sometimes, and waited for his neighbors and friends to drop in and buy.

Later on his son inherited the business, if it had not gone to the wall, adopted a slightly more aggressive attitude toward the securing of trade, and called himself a merchant. Here and there a venturesome soul began to really study business methods and actually plan for a greater volume and a wider trade radius. Some became real business men and reaped rich rewards.

Later still, the department store and mail order house came into existence, recently followed by the chain stores, which now seem to menace the small merchant, and even threaten to drive him out of business.

In spite of these revolutionary developments, however, thousands of independent merchants are making money today. They are doing it thrugh adopting scientific methods of buying and selling, through the employment of systematic accounting, through a study of their customers' requirements, and through ADVERTISING.

But a great many scorn such new-fangled ideas, and stay in the rut in which their forefathers ran their course. They are headed for bankruptcy and don't know why. But to anyone with a fundamental knowledge of modern business practices the reason is plain. These failures are not business men, not even merchants—they are only old-fashioned storekeepers—who have never learned that it pays to advertise.

TOO MUCH PROSPERITY

If recent reports are to be believed, Germany may suffer from the fact that she is too prosperous. This paradoxical situation is explained thus:

Representatives of the Allied powers will shortly meet to consider the fixing of the total amount of reparations which Germany shall pay on account of damage wrought by her during the World war. Naturally, Germany wants this amount placed as low as possible, while her recent adversaries want as much as Germany is able to pay.

Now, the recent report by Seymour Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparations, who has charge of reparation payments, indicates that the economic conditions in Germany are much better than had been expected. If this is true, it is thought that the Allies will demand a greater amount in reparations than would have been demanded had Germany's condition been less favorable.

There is no doubt that the rapidity of Germany's recovery since the war has been almost phenomenal, as the treaty which deprived her of a large army and navy also enabled her to save vast sums which would have been spent on those establishments otherwise.

However, regardless of what the exact conditions may be, it is hoped that the vexing question of reparations may soon be settled once for all, so that this source of future discord may be eliminated in the interest of continued peace.

PASSING OF TEX RICKARD

Public interest in sports being what it is, the death of George L. ("Tex") Ricard in Miami, after a brief illness, attracted nation-wide notice beyond that which might attach to the passing of a high official or other dignitary.

Rickard was a character such as is commonly described as "colorful," and his preeminence as a promoter of championship bouts—his greatest claim to prominence—had served to keep him in the limelight for several years. And it can not be denied that in his particular line of effort he was a master. Rickard was regarded as a "square shooter," and he is credited with numerous acts of charity. He had many friends in every section of this country, and had also made a few enemies.

Any promoter who can induce a crowd of fight fans to pay $2,650,000 to witness a boxing bout, as they did to see Tunney win a decision over Dempsey, on September 22, 1927, is a showman extraordinary. In several other battles staged by Rickard the gate receipts were between $1,000,000 and $1,800,000.

While the followers of fisticuffs felt that Rickard's prices and purses were high, they still stood for them, and he might have repeated his former exploits had he lived. The boxing game lost a real friend in the passing of Tex Rickard.

OFF TO A FLYING START

Aviation in the year 1929 is literally "off to a flying start." The first few days of the new year saw the epoch-making sustained flight of the big army plane, the Question Mark, which remained aloft more than 150 hours, being refueled more than a score of times in mid-air, both day and night.

Another important development since January 1 is the inauguration of the air mail between the United States and Central America and to islands of the Carribean.

Woman's part in aviation was also emphasized by the record-breaking solo endurance flight for women, by Miss Bobbie Trout, who remained in the air more than twelve hours; also by Miss Amelia Earhart's flight with the Central American air mail.

Soon we may hear of new exploits by Byrd in the Antartic. No end of ambitious flights are being planned throughout the world. It looks as though 1929 is going to be another great flying year.

TIRE PLANTS SCATTER

In a recent article, Basil Manly, a well known economist, called attention to the location of a large automobile tire factory at Gadsden, Alabama, which he declared to be the beginning of a movement to decentralize tire manufaucture in the United States. This is in line with a recent trend in industry, which is in the direction of decentralization of manufacturing, instead of concentration in congested areas.

Mr. Manly quoted leading tire manufacturers and business leaders, who predict a general movement of tire factories to several Southern states, where they will be scattered over a wide territory, many of them in towns of comparatively small size, such as Gadsden.

The same reasons that have caused other industries to seek the smaller communities are given as contributing factors to this movement by the tire factories, namely, nearness to raw materials, a more satisfactory class of labor, better living conditions for workers, abundant and cheap electric power, and a close-by market for the manufactured product.

That this shift of manufacturing to the smaller cities and towns will enable many of them to rapidly grow in importance and prosperity can not be doubted. Every community should be awake to its opportunities for securing its share of new industries, which make payrolls, better markets for products of the farm, and thereby confer benefits upon town and rural populations alike.

Colma News Notes

Frank Garibaldi has been on the sick list this week, suffering from blood poisoning in his hand.

Mrs. Sylvia Fischer entertained Mrs. P. J. Millet and little grandson, Russel McPartland, of Santa Rosa, on last Monday.

James Casey, Jr., motored to Sonora over last week end with a group of friends and enjoyed the snow and winter sports there.

R. H. Cuzan, late of Hollywood, has taken over the management of the Colma Theatre aand promises many new features and good shows in the future.

The Hubert Bazinet family, of Rockaway Beach, are now located on Washington street, where they will make their home, according to their present plans.

Ray Batz, son of Mrs. Beatrice Batz, who has been playing for the past year with the Allen's Band in the state of Washington, is expected home the first of next month for a two weeks' vacation.

"Fantasio," a playlet, was given by the intermediate group of girls of the Capp Street Girls' Club last Wednesday evening. A group of friends from Colma attended, all of whom thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment.

Mr. V. Del Sarto, of Mission street, who underwent an operation at a San Francisco hospital recently, is on the road to recovery. Mr. Del Sarto returned to his home last week, and his many friends are pleased to hear of his recovery.

The Girls' Club of Capp Street opened its regular courses on Thursday evening of this week. Many members are from the Girls' Club of Colma, who are very enthusiastic over the progress they are making at the Capp Street Girls' Club.

Mr. Thomas Callan, of Washington street, returned home last week end after enjoying a delightful week's motor trip in his Nash car in the southern part of the state and Mexico. Mr. Callan reports weather conditions in the south just about the same as here.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fischer and little daughter Sylvia and Bennie Haubrich motored over the Skyline boulevard last Sunday to visit with B. Silva in Palo Alto. While going over Kings Mountain they stopped over and enjoyed a snowball fight in the snow that covered the mountain and trees.

Little Miss Inez, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Garibaldi, was christened last Saturday at Holy Angels' church by Rev. Father Schenone. Mrs. L. Garibaldi acted as godmother, and Mr. J. Ginelli as godfather. A family dinner followed at the home of the baby's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Garibaldi.

C. L. Hollis, manager of the Mission Ice Company, has moved his offices and factory from San Francisco to Colma, and is very well pleased with his new location.

A whist party will be held this Saturday evening, January 26, at the Salada Beach school house, and it is expected that a number of Colma residents will be present. The committee in charge is Mrs. F. Chambers, Mrs. G. Strei, Mrs. M. O. Anderson, Mrs. F. Holling and Mrs. Van Hook.

"The Gypsy Lover," a musical play in three acts, will be given by the choral section of To Kalon Club in Founders Hall of the Women's Club Building on Sutter street, San Francisco, on Tuesday evening, February 29. Beatrice Batz, popular bookkeeper for M. Belli & Co., will be one of the singers.

Miss Barton, of San Francisco, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Warwell, of San Pedro avenue, who has been confined to a hospital, suffering from diphtheria for the past several weeks, is greatly improved and is expected to return to the Wardwell home the coming week end. Miss Barton's many friends and acquaintances here wish her a speedy recovery.

On Friday evening, February 8, the San Francisco Girls' Athletic Club will hold a Valentine dansant and whist party at the Hotel St. Francis, in San Francisco. Tickets are now on sale and a huge crowd is expected to attend. Music for dancing will be furnished by Roland's orchestra, and all who attend either dance or whist are assured a wonderful time. The game will start at 8 o'clock.

Fred Bauer, who injured his leg while working on the county road several weeks ago, is still confined at the South San Francisco hospital, but is gradually improving. The cast on his leg has been removed and a new one put on, as the ankle has not thoroughly knitted as yet. Mr. Bauer's many friends hope it will not be long before he will be out and about again.

On Wednesday evening, January 9, the Girls' Club of Colma were entertained at a delicious supper at the home of Mrs. M. P. Brown which was greatly enjoyed by the following; Mrs. A. M. Sheldon, Mrs. Pauline Shinazy, Misses Fabian Ver Linden, Anna Kennedy, Alice Thiel, Violet Ver Linden, Bertha Thiel and Elsie Wilke. After supper the evening was spent in arranging the Girls' Club 1929 calendar and telling of many different interesting incidents.

It was with much sorrow that the many friends and relatives of Alfred Selmi learned of his sudden death on last Saturday. Mr. Selmi, who was a pioneer of Colma, was the beloved husband of Esola Selmi and father of Julius Selmi, Mrs. Amelia Martini, Mrs. Theresa Marchi and Mrs. Amanda Ferretti, and brother of Angelo and Felice Selmi and Adele Pasquinelli, of Chicago. He was a native of Italy. He was a member of Court Colma No. 82, F. of A., and Nido Marconi No. 1787, O. O. O., of Colma. The funeral services were held last Tuesday morning, when a requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul at Holy Angels' church, Colma. Interment was at the Italian cemetery.

AMERICAN LEGION BEGINS NATIONAL SAFETY CAMPAIGN

"The American Legion is engaging this year in a great national campaign to prevent fatal accidents, especially among the children, and the world war veterans of California will do their share to help in the movement", State Commander Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., declares in a statement to the three hundred odd posts of his organization in the state.

The American Legion officials will co-operate with the California Development Association, the Automobile Clubs and other agencies in the safety campaign in this state and will conduct a safety drive in every state in the Union. In discussing the Legion's plans, State Commander Belgrano says, "The Legion will seek to give a wider knowledge of accidents and how best to prevent them. It will seek to develope a habit of mind, especially among the young, to constantly be on guard and to use caution.

"In many departments of the Legion this valuable work is already under way. The Legion has its safety councils that study the highly technicle matter. Educational campaigns have been carried on in the schools and in public with splendid results in cutting down the number of accidents. Road signs and warnings have been erected at stragetic points in the cities and along the country highways. Junior traffic corps have been organized to look after the younger children in the schools, as they cross busy streets. Antiquated traffic systems of some of the towns have even been replaced by standard, modern plans, through Legion insistance.

"Legionnaires have distributed thousands of safety pamplets, sponsored poster contests on the subject, studied traffic conditions with a view to remedy unsafe practices, sponsored brake tests, and shown safety posters in prominent places. Legion speakers in several states have carried the safety message repeatedly before the school children.

People spend more for candy than for books. Possibly because there is more good candy than good books.

ORDINANCE NO. 158

An Ordinance amending Ordinance No. 132 of the City of Daly City, entitled "An Ordinance Licensing for the Purpose of Regulation and Revenue Every Kind of Lawful Business Hereinafter Specified, Transacted or Carried On, within the Corporate Limits of the City of Daly City, State of California, Fixing Rate or License Tax upon the Same, and Providing for the Collection of Said License Tax, and Punishment for Carrying on Same without a License," adopted January 14, 1924, by adding a new section thereto, numbered Section 13-A, and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF DALY CITY DO ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Ordinance No. 132 of the City of Daly City, entitled "An Ordinance Licensing for the Purpose of Regulation and Revenue Every Kind of Lawful Business Hereinafter Specified, Transacted or Carried on, within the Corporate Limits of the City of Daly City, State of California, Fixing Rate or License Tax upon the Same, and Providing for the Collection of Said License Tax, and Punishment for Carrying on Same without a License," passed and adopted as an Ordinance of said City, by the Board of Trustees of said City, on the 14th day of January, 1924, is hereby amended by adding a new section thereto, numbered "13-A," to read as follows:

SECTION 13-A. If the license herein provided is not paid within thirty (30) days after the same becomes due, the Tax Collector shall add 10 per cent. to the amount of the license as a penalty for non-payment. If the license is not paid within sixty (60) days after it becomes due, the Tax Collector shall add 15 per cent. to the amount of the license as a penalty for non-payment. If the license is not paid within ninety (90) days after it becomes due, the Tax Collector shall add 25 per cent. to the amount of the license as a penalty for non-payment. Nothing shall permit the exemption of the penalties mentioned in this section except the filing with the Tax Collector of a Bill of Sale or a copy thereof by the purchaser or new owner, at the time of payment of any of the licenses mentioned in this Ordinance.

SECTION 2. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this Ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than Three Hundred and 00-100 (300.00) Dollars, or by imprisonment for a period of not more than three (3) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SECTION 3. This Ordinance shall be published in the Daly City Record, a weekly newspaper published and circulated in the City of Daly City, in the manner provided by law.

SECTION 4. This Ordinance shall be in full force and effect thirty (30) days from and after its passage and approval.

INTRODUCED: December 27, 1928.

AN INSPIRATION TO CHILDREN

As an inspiration for her four children, a Mission Beach, California, mother reads to them the stories of the men and women of the Bell Telephone system, whose devotion to the public service has won citations and Vail medals. In a request for the latest ciitations she says: "I am eager to place before them worth while reading of real heroic work of today. They listen earnestly to my reading of the telephone men and their brave work."

The U. S. A. is only a few minutes wide

THE Bell System is ever busy reducing the width of America and the distance between cities. For example, in the last five years 350 major improvements, as well as thousands of others whose aggregate importance mounts high, have been made in telephone central office equipment.

Improved operating practices have eliminated the necessity of your "hanging up" and being called back in 95 per cent of toll and long distance calls, adding new speed and ease to out of town calling. You hold the wire and the operator does the rest.

Since New Year's Day, 1927, the average time for completing all out of town calls has been cut 35 per cent and at the same time the per cent of error has been further materially reduced.

There is no standing still in the Bell System. Better and better telephone service at the lowest cost is the goal. Present improvements constantly going into effect are but the foundation for the future's greater service.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Receipts at the Pittsburg postoffice were $5,000 higher in 1928 than in 1927, according to the annual report of Harry A. Barnes, secretary of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce.

Novice duck hunters, whose only protection against wasting their shells on mudhens has been their inky black plumage, are now in a quandry, for Floyd Jenkins of Chico has killed a white mudhen. He says he saw the bird and because of the white feathers thought it was a duck.

Miss Amanda M. Hicks, 87, cousin of Abraham Lincoln, died in Turlock a short time tgo. For twenty-two years she was connected with Clinton College, Clinton, Ky., and for sixteen years of that time she was president. Coming to California thirty-one years ago, she had been connected with educational and welfare work of the University of California for twenty years.

Announcement that a 200-room hotel, eight stories in height will be erected in Stockton this year was made by a syndicate headed by Hubert H. Briggs, president of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, and D. J. Richard, former secretary-manager of the same organiztaion. The building will cost $750,000. Later, plans for a theater and facilities for a club may be included.

The camera lied in the case of Miss Inspiration, it seems. Protest that uncomplimentary photographs, and not the original of the nude statute gracing the State Library, have caused the recent outcry against that work was issued today by the sculptor, Edward Field Sanborn. In a formal statement which the New York artist made public through library officials at Sacramento, Sanborn declared that, with the exception of one New York critic, mentless pose of his inspired marble there was no sensation over the garuntil photographs taken in Sacramento and widely disseminated reached the public.

Southern California communities each will have vested right in Colorado river water brought through a proposed aqueduct from Boulder canyon dam to the southern part of the State. That is the purport of a tentative agreement reached at a conference in Sacramento between Governor Young, John Bacon of the Colorado River Commission, H. N. Savage, hydraulic engineer of San Diego, and Senator Edwin Mueller of El Cajon. Legislation is contemplated calling for a bond issue to construct an aqueduct to bring into Southern California a portion of the Boulder canyon dam water, should such action be taken San Diego desires to participate, Mueller said, and the conference was arranged with a view of protecting that city's right.

Life is just one thrill after another in Gerber, where the folks go in for things worth while. Just now the community is preparing to go in for farm relief. They intend to show what the well-dressed farmer should wear and to that end will stage a style show some time this month. The farmers are tired of taking their ideas in nifty overalls and hickory shirts from the movies and hereafter will get their styles from Gerber instead of from Hollywood. Cosutmes shown will be useful but also ornamental, with a touch of the collegiate or something. They will include suitable and eye-compelling garments for the cattle rancher, including the latest thing in chaps; the sheep herder, with the latest crook in sheep-staffs; the dirt farmer and the chicken rancher.

Quail in parts of Southern California are receiving their food like the Israelites of old when the manna descended upon them from heaven. The quail are given a regular ration of grain from aeroplanes swooping close to where they are grouped in green spots that resisted the extensive grass fires last fall, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California. The existing situation is believed to be the first of its kind. In the grass and brush fires which ravaged 100,000 acres last fall tens of thousands of quail escaped the fires with singed wings and legs. Not only were they physically handicapped, but found that the fire had destroyed practically all of their food. The birds grouped themselves in the little valleys where there remained sufficient moisture to resist the fire, but did not have range enough to eke out an existence without the aid of man. Daily flights of aeroplanes now carry food to the feathered refugees. Every effort is being made to keep them alive until the winter rains bring back the grasses, plant life and insects upon which they depend for existence.

More full-time students are registered at the University of California than at any other American college. That was announced by the Association of American Universities in Associated Press dispatches. Regular term students at both Berkeley and Los Angeles totales 17,337. Second on the list is Columbia University in New York City with 13.691. The next four in order are the University of Illinois, University of Minnesota, University of Michigan, and New York University.

Police are looking for a man reported to be counterfeiting and selling California automobile license plates in Seattle. Andrew W. Roberts, bricklaying contractor, reported to the police that a stranger had canvassed his workmen on a job offering to sell California plates at $5 a set.

A course in air navigation is being given through the University of California extension division by Emory Bronte, navigator of the City of Oakland during the flight from the Oakland airport to Hawaii. The class opened Thursday at the extension building, 540 Powell street, San Francisco.

Liquor is so plentiful in San Francisco that E. R. Bohner, prohibition administrator, is unable to find space to store that confiscated by his agents. A section of the Appraisers' building which was assigned to Bohner's use for storage purposes, has been filled by the raids of the past week and other space must be found.

Abolition of the motor vehicle speed limit on California highways has been proposed by Assemblyman Morgan Keaton of Long Beach. Keaton's bill would repeal the present provisions for a speed limit of 40 miles an hour on the open road, thus requiring traffic officers, so he said, to concentrate on the actual crime of reckless driving.

The beacon on Benton Airport, Redding's aviation field, was recently turned on for the first time. The beacon flashes its great beam of light at intervals of ten seconds and can be seen for miles around. The beacon is one of a series erected at intervals on the route between Oakland and Portola The next beacon on the north is to be at Delta, forty miles away.

State Superintendent of Banks Will C. Wood has approved the agreement for purchase and sale of the First National Trust and Savings Bank of Whittier by the Bank of America of California. Assets of the purchased institution were $5,736,000, deposits $5,017,000, capital and surplus $500,000. The bank will open as a branch of the Bank of America of California.

The trapping season in the northern part of the state is much better than usual, even the women going into the business. Mrs. Lorraine Spurbeck of French Gulch has out a line of thirty traps. Up at Delta, Mrs. R. E. Pyle has fifty traps out along Dog Creek and up the mountain side. She visits every trap every day and in making the rounds walks five miles a day.

With the arrest of five men and the seizure of two damaged airplanes recently United States officials declared they had broken up the most amazing Chinese smuggling organization which had ever operated in the West. At least 250 alien Chinese had been brought across the Mexican border by airplane within the last four months, government investigators declared.

Oakland now takes its place among the shipping centers of the world, as it becomes an official port of entry. The distinction was given the city through an executive order by President Coolidge, a copy of which has been received by William B. Hamilton, Collector of Customs in San Francisco. The order was forwarded by R. F. Roemer, acting chief of the finance division of the treasury department.

Favorably reporting a Senate bill authorizing the Southern Pacific to cross the Benecial Arsenal in connection with their $12,000,000 Carquinez Strait bridge project, a house military affairs sub-committee aided the plan recently, according to dispatches. The Southern Pacific plans to build the bridge from Army Point on the north shore to Suisun Point on the south. The bridge will be 5,597 feet long and will do away with the train ferry at that point.

Before one of the largest attended meeting recently of the city board of trustees of Oakdale, held in many months, that body officialy went on record as favoring the acquisition of a tract of land necessary for an airport. A committee of five citizens was appointed by the mayor to investigate and clear up certain legal phrases of the matter, the city's financial status and look into likely sites for the proposed airport, and report their finding soon at the regular meeting of the board.

Warning to all state traffic officers to treat infractions of traffic rules by drivers of low numbered cars as others was sent out by Colonel Frank G. Snook, chief of the motor vehicle division a short time ago. The action was taken, Snook said, as the result of reports that immunity against punishment had been granted owners of cars accorded license plates low in numerical rating. "This type of plate carried with it no special privilege or courtesies not extended to every motorist," Snook's order read.

BILLIE BROWNIE

"Let's make the biggest snow man ever made," said Billie Brownie. "There is good snow for it, and there are plenty of us to work."

"We Have Forgotten Something."

The other brownies and gnomes thought it was a good idea. So they piled up snow and then cleared a space for the man to stand upon.

They all had brought their shovels along and they worked very hard.

At last it was time to start with the snow man.

Billie Brownie made his feet first of all, and so they made him on up until his head was all ready.

Then, of course, he had to have a hat, and Peter Gnome made a very handsome high one.

"We have forgotten something," said Billie Brownie.

"What?" they all asked.

"A pipe for his mouth," said Billie.

"To be sure," said Peter Gnome. "A snow man isn't a real snow man without a pipe.

"We'll make it right away."

So they got some twigs off the tree and some wood, and with their little pen knives they all made pipes.

The very best pipe of all was chosen for the snow man, while the other pipes they put around on the ground beside him.

"For," said Peter Gnome, "he ought to have a little collection of pipes. Different ones for different times."

And, indeed, he was the tallest snow man that had ever been made, and he looked so jolly and happy—just as if he had longed to be made of the snow for some time.

He reached up so far that when it grew dark Mr. Moon came out and said:

"What is it I see? A man who is almost tall enough to talk to me. What fun."

And then how he grinned when he found out the man had been made out of snow.

"I might have known there was some joke when I saw so many brownies and gnomes about," laughed the Moon.

"Well," said Peter Gnome, "will you give us bright light?" "Yes, indeed," said Mr. Moon. "But tell me why you want it?" "We want to sing songs and dance around our snow man," said Peter Gnome again.

Danced and Sang Songs.

"We'll help you give light, too," said the Stars.

"Splendid," shouted the Gnomes and the Brownies.

So all the evening the Gnomes and the Brownies danced and sang songs around their snow man, and he had been made so firmly that some of them climbed up and sat on his arms and even on his shoulders when they grew tired.

How Mr. Moon did enjoy it!

And the Stars were so happy and bright.

But Billie Brownie was the proudest brownie in Brownieland that night, for he had suggested making the tall snow man.

No More Promises

Little Jack and Junior, cousins, seldom agree.

Mother talked to Jack, saying: "You are six months older than Junior. Try and get along without so much trouble."

Jack promised he would. A few days after he came in dirty and disgusted. Mother, all sympathy, inquired: "What's the trouble, Jack?"

The indignant reply was: "I won't promise again and get fighted up like this."

Table Etiquette

Little Harry—I wish I were you, uncle.

Uncle (who has been invited to dinner)—Why do you wish that, sonny?

Little Harry—Because you don't pull your ears when you eat with your knife.

Don't Write, Wire

Teacher—If you can never learn to write how will you be able to carry on correspondence when you grow up?

Johnny—I won't have to do any writing, because all of my folks live right in town.

Making Taffy

Nancy Jane had just returned from a little party and was displaying all the favors, including some homemade taffy.

When her daddy asked her if she made the candy, she replied: "No, daddy, Joan's mother made it and we stretched it."

OLD SPITBALLER WAS BIG WINNER

Clarence Mitchell Helped Cardinals Win Flag.

When Frankhouse and Reinhardt, from whom much was expected, failed them last spring, and when Rhem began to go bad in the early summer, the Cardinals had only the three veterans, Haines, Alexander and Sherdell, to carry them through the long pennant grind. It was then that they took a gamble on Clarence Mitchell, who had been given his unconditional release by the Phillies. When Breadon signed Mitchell he made a fine stroke, for the ancient spitballer with the crippled wing suddenly returned to form and pitched and won some vital games for the Cards at a critical time in the pennant race. He was most effective against the Giants, who were the most dangerous contenders for the flag.

Mitchell won eight and lost nine for the Cards last season, but all his defeats with two exceptions were close and finely pitched games with low scores. Clarence pitched fine ball almost every time he took the hill. He was the most effective of all the Cardinal pitchers in the last world series, allowing only two hits in six innings, and many baseball men believe he would have won a game if he had been allowed to start one.

It is to be doubted if any pitcher in major league history has had as much trouble with his arm as has Mitchell. He once said that his arm gave him trouble when he pitched for Red Cloud, Neb., back in 1910 when he was only a kid of nineteen. Since then he has been on the pay roll of three minor league and five major league clubs, working through 18 seasons under this pitching handicap. When he cut loose that deceptive left hand spitter and pitched effectively he always paid for it with a sore arm for a week. But last season, for the first time in all these years Mitchell was free from trouble with his arm for three months at a stretch.

Mitchell was born near Alliance, Neb., on a farm 37 years ago, and his folks still live on the old home place. He pitched for a semi-pro team in the town of Franklin when only eighteen and won 40 of 44 games that season. He gained much local renown and a Red Cloud contract and a sore arm from his first year on the hill. They must have played mighty fast ball in Red Cloud, Neb., some 16 and 18 years ago, for Mitchell won 14 and lost 13 in that state league circuit. And then two years after his day came Dazzy Vance and won only 13 and lost 14 in that league while pitching for this same Red Cloud club.

Right Umpires Always Sure of Getting Job

There's one good thing about a big league umpire turning manager, and that is he can always get his old job back.

Some years ago Hank O'Day was going about his business of calling 'em right and wrong in the National league when Garry Herrman drafted him to manage the Cincinnati Reds. Hank was not much of a success as a manager and when he was released he was welcomed back to his old job as umpire by the league.

George Moriarty quit umpiring in the American league two years ago to take Ty Cobb's place as manager of the Tigers. Moriarty, after a poor season last year, was given his release by Frank Navin.

But good umpires are scarce these days, and Moriarty wasn't out of a job long, as it was announced at the meeting in Chicago that he would be back in the American league next season as an umpire.

Lee, Macon Outfielder, Boosted by Nap Rucker

Nap Rucker, scout of the Brooklyn club, said that the Macon club has a budding young outfielder in Lee. Nap didn't know his first name, but he knew a lot about his ball playing and said the youngster would be ready for the Robins in 1930.

"Lee is one of the most promising young outfielders I ever looked at," said Rucker. "He is big, fast and can hit. All that he lacks now is experience and he will get plenty of that in another season.

"He is a right-handed hitter and puts plenty of power behind his swing. He should be ready for big league baseball by 1930."

The Macon club is owned by the Robins.

Pay Roll Simple in Italian Rice Fields

A customary preliminary to harvest time, which begins in early September in Italy's rice-growing center surrounding the city of Alessandria, in the Piedmont, is that the farmers and peasants arrange for wages and other labor matters. Last year the respective syndicates of workers and growers reached an agreement based on "compensation by nature" or emolument in kind. No money to the worker; he shall be paid with rice.

Thus peasant lads from fourteen to fifteen years of age receive 17½ pounds of rice a day, those from fifteen to sixteen earn 23 pounds a day, and boys from sixteen to seventeen years get 35 pounds. Girls from fifteen to sixteen earn 20 pounds of rice for the eight-hour day, while the women's stipend is 26½ pounds.

Should a laborer insist on cold cash, the grower will be troubled with the necessity of utilizing his arithmetic. For he must take the number of pounds the worker is entitled to and multiply it by the current market price, which is about 3 cents a pound.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Tale of a Pig's Tail

"There's pig sense for you," asserted J. Schneider of Winsted, Conn., after relating the following pig-apple story:

The pig was confined in a pen of which an apple tree made one of the posts. Investigation of its peculiar actions disclosed that the pig obtained apples which fell close to the outside of the pen by sitting on its haunches with its back against the fence and, passing its tail under the fence, would feel around until it located an apple. The animal would then allow its tail to curl about the apple and would work its body forward, bringing the fruit under the fence into the pen.

Kingdom of Nepal

Street Scene in Patan, Nepal.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

AMONG the Himalayan mountains, of which it owns a fair portion, is the Kingdom of Nepal. Often heard of, it is one of the native Asian states of which least is known.

With the exception of the British resident and a few European officials who live in the residency grounds at Khatmandu, the capital, no one is allowed to visit the country without a special permit issued by the durbar. When the pass or permit has been obtained, visitors are obliged to travel by one particular route and are not allowed to go beyond the valley of Khatmandu, a tract of country about fifteen miles wide by twenty miles long, surrounded by high mountains.

It is this valley of about three hundred square miles that gives the country its name, for to the natives it is Nepal. In the valley are situated the modern capital of Khatmandu and the old and much more picturesque capitals of Patan and Bhatgaon. At some time in the remote past this valley was a lake, and the vast accumulation of water must eventually have cut for itself an outlet through the barrier of mountains to the south. Gradually there was left bare the rich alluvial deposit now drained by three rivers—the Baghmutti, Vishnumatti and Manchera.

These rivers have cut deep channels, through which they make their way until, converging in a narrow gorge, they finally find their outlet to the plains of India as the Baghmutti. This old lake bed forms an expanse of the most fertile soil, industriously cultivated from end to end.

The few Europeans who have been privileged to live for a time in the lovely valley of Khatmandu are enthusiastic over the beauty of its changing aspects at different seasons—pale green with growing rice, golden at harvest time, white with blossoms in spring, and brown and bare during the short winter, but always beautiful.

Best Roads Kept Secret.

The dearth of knowledge about Nepal applies also to the roads to this secluded kingdom. Although the "official road" from the plains of India is kept almost impassable, there are probably more passable highways. One of the few English visitors to the valley tells that, although he was usually taken over the difficult road, on one occasion the military escort had temporarily left him and he blundered on to an excellent road leading to the capital.

Religion plays an important part in the lives of the Nepalese. Officially the religion is Hinduism, but it is colored by older forms of Tantric worship, and by Buddhism.

In the structural features of their architecture and its ornamentation, in their sacred utensils, arms and armor, in their household implements, vestments, jewelry, everything, there is a similarity and special form which runs through all these eastern Himalayan states.

The royal temple of the Goddess Taleju, the protectress of the ruling family of Nepal, is the finest building in the Durbar group in the city of Khatmandu and is kept exclusively for the use of the royal family.

Bim Sens tower, a building nearly two hundred feet in height, stands out above the other buildings in the city. It is merely a tower, with no particular meaning, although the Nepalese have a legend that the great Jung Bahadur leaped on horseback from the top and was uninjured.

The modern palaces, although containing valuable collections of various objects of art, are of very little interest externally, with no architectural features of note.

One of the Older Capitals.

Bhatgaon, one of the oldest Newar capitals, lies about seven miles south east of Khatmandu, and, with its numerous temples, shrines and statues, all of the greatest architectural value it is even more interesting than the capital.

Through winding, crowded, dirty streets, with wooden colonnades overhung by the balconies of old houses, one reaches the central square, on all sides of which buildings have been erected with the most picturesque irregularity, the finest among them being the Durbar hall, with its magnificent doorway of brick and embossed copper gilt, built in the reign of Bhupatindra Mall. This doorway is one of the finest pieces of work in Nepal and on it is depicted the whole symbolism of the Hindu and Buddhist religions.

Facing the doorway is the statue of Raja Bhupatindra Mall, an extremely well executed figure in bronze, seated on a boldly designed pedestal of stone on a square pillar about 20 feet in height, with the royal umbrella rising above the figure.

Close by is the Ujatpola Deval, or Temple of Five Hagis, which stands on five platforms up which a flight of steps leads to the entrance. This stairway is guarded by five enormous pairs of figures carved in stone, the lowest pair being two giant wrestlers; above them two elephants ten times as strong as the men; above two lions ten times as strong as the elephants; next, two dragons ten times as strong as the lions, and finally two deities, most powerful of all.

In this square is also the Taumari Tol, dedicated to the Goddess Bhawani. The shrine in front has two magnificent brass dragons, one on each side, decorated with great splashes of vermilion. The brickwork is covered with brass plates deeply embossed, and on each side, on a lotus pillar, is a copper gilt lion holding a banner. This building has quaint and grotesque moldings painted in most vivid colors and lattice windows made of strips of gilt metal, the whole presenting a kaleidoscopic effect in the brilliant sunshine.

Pashpati is the holy center of Nepal, to which tens of thousands of pilgrims flock during the few days, once a year, when the country is thrown open. The roads are then one long, unending crowd of men and women, old and young, chanting as they go, "Pashpati nath ke-Jai."

Temples and Gardens.

The Temple of Changu-Narain is situated on a spur of a mountain about eight miles to the east of Khatmandu and is reached by a winding path of stone steps, to climb which is part of the pilgrimage. It is one of the finest temples in Nepal, a veritable treasure-house of relics, its courtyard full of wonderful stone pillars and statues, the cloisters with exquisite carvings in many places richly colored and everywhere flashing sheets of hammered metal; brass and copper gilt beaten into every possible form—birds, beasts, fishes, dragons—standing out on a background of conventional design; bells everywhere; brass umbrellas, the emblems of royalty; great brazon and stone beasts crouching on all sides.

The water garden of Balajee is a most fascinating spot, a mile or two outside Khatmandu, at the end of a long, shady avenue of trees. It is much frequented by the townspeople in the cool of the evening. The fresh spring water is collected in a number of terraced pools one above the other, clear as crystal and reflecting the green of the surrounding trees and bamboos. Along the supporting wall of the lowest pool is a row of about twenty dragon-head spouts, some enormous, others smaller, but all beautifully carved and executed, from which clear water splashes into a tank beneath.

Balajee has its own religious significance, found in a small tank on one side, near a temple decorated with Tantric carvings. Under the water lies a carved stone figure of Narain, about ten feet long, with a hood of cobra heads just rising above the water. It reclines on a stone bed with four carved posts, rising one from each corner, evidently at one time the support of a canopy. Fish dart here and there in the clear water which gently flows over it. Narain is the creator Brahma

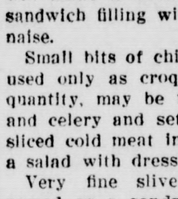
LITTLE THINGS



How important for the great majority of housewives is the matter of appreciating the value of little things. It is not only wrong to waste, but it shows a lack of efficiency. The American housewife as a matter of pride wants to be capable and efficient.

Even if one has a family of four or five there are often bits too good and of too small amount to make more than one dish; but that should be prepared and the family take turns with or have the choice of dishes. One thrifty housewife who has a dish of pudding, a piece of pie or cake, or any food of one serving too little to add to salads or other dishes arranges a tray of several of these dainties and the family are all anxious to see what is to be served. It is like a glorified grab bag, for they never know what is coming.

The wing tips of a fowl, with a stalk of celery or an onion, a bit of parsley and a teaspoonful of cream added when serving will make a most dainty cup of soup. The bone from steaks or chops, with rice or barley simmered on the back of the stove will make another cup of soup. A dab of potato, even if only a tablespoonful, will make, with milk, onion, celery, with a bit of flour and butter, a cupful of cream soup. Scalloped, baked or even fried potatoes may be converted into soup.

One clam, with cold rice, a dash of seasoning and a little butter with parsley makes a delightful hot broth for an aged person who needs to be fed as carefully as the small child.

A slice or two of cold chicken with lettuce, pepper grass or watercress will make a dainty salad or a nice sandwich filling with a bit of mayonnaise.

Small bits of chicken which can be used only as croquettes, if in small quantity, may be mixed with gelatin and celery and set away to mold as sliced cold meat in a sandwich or as a salad with dressing.

Very fine slivers of cold steak served as a sandwich filling are delicious. Leftover chicken fricasse may be made into chicken pie, with more milk.

Cook a cold lamb chop, mince the meat and cook the bone, serve on toast with a bit of tart jelly.

Campfire Cookery.

In this age of skiing and mountain climbing, skating and outdoor sports of all kinds, the season may govern some of the food, but the appetite and opportunity for enjoyment of camp cooking is perhaps greater in the winter than in the summer.

Oriental Kebab.—This is food cooked on long green withes of willow or other green wood. Cut meat into inch squares and alternate with slices of onion. Place over coals across forked sticks or opposite rocks and turn slowly until the meat is deliciously brown. Salt and pepper after the cooking is done or after the meat is seared over with the heat. Serve with potatoes baked in their jackets in the ashes.

Arizona Chicken.—Select a fat pullet, dress carefully, dust inside with salt, pepper and a little flour and add one or two slices of bacon under each wing and across the breast. Tie the wings down and wrap in a clean flour sack, tying tightly. Drop for a moment into a bucket of water, then wrap with another flour sack, dip again and cover with a thick layer of newspaper, dip and wrap with more paper until well covered with layers of paper. Now rake the coals on one side and cover with a thin layer of cold ashes. Put in the fowl, cover with more ashes, then pile on the hot embers and coals. Leave undisturbed for an hour. Remove the papers and take out the fowl very carefully. It will be found brown, dripping with gravy and a most delicious flavor.

Corn Bread Baked in Ashes.—Mix three cupfuls of corn meal with one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add enough cold water to make a stiff dough, then take it up in the hands and roll into balls two inches in diameter. Roll in dry flour and bake in hot ashes, which should completely cover them. Bake about twenty minutes.

Baked Fish.—Make a hole in the ground about eighteen inches deep and large enough to hold the article to be cooked. Build a fire in it and let it burn to coals. Lift out the coals leaving the hot ashes at the bottom. Upon this place a thick layer of grass, then the fish that has been cleaned, cover with grass, then coals and loose earth, build a fire over it and bake three-fourths hour.

Cheese toasted is impaled on a stick and toasted over the fire. Sausages likewise impaled on a green stick will cook to a turn over coals.

Sports That Put Too Much Tax on Athlete

Although not one case of heart disease traceable to athletics has been found in investigations into the condition of college athletes, the old myth of "athletic heart" still persists, points out Hugh Fullerton in Liberty Magazine.

The writer, however, admits that there are some athletic activities that are dangerous. "Rowing, especially in four-mile races," he writes, "is held up as the most dangerous of all contests in its after effects, and the quarter and half-mile runs are deemed the most dangerous in track athletics. The terrific strain upon the respiratory system in these contests is dangerous except to perfectly prepared men, and they sometimes result in permanent heart injuries."

Geyser May Yield Power

Some day scientists believe the power developed by live steam tapped from the Sonora county geyser district in California will be enough to light all the towns and cities in the state and run all its street cars, trains and factories. The big problem is to draw off the steam and harness it to power units Dr. E. T. Allen, of the Carnegie institute, has had six wells drilled 200 to 500 feet deep, one of which delivers 50,000 pounds of steam an hour. The roar of the escaping steam can be heard for miles.—Capper's Weekly.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME II FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1929 NUMBER 26

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

A new 5 and 10 cent store had been opened. A woman came in one day and selected a toy for which she handed the proprietor a dime.

"Excuse me, lady," said the proprietor, "but these toys are 15 cents."

"But I thought this was a 5 and 10 cent store," protested the customer.

"Vell, I leave it to you," came the reply; "how much is it, 5 and 10 cents?"

First Delegate: "Did you fill your date last night?"

Second Delegate: "I hope so. She ate everything in sight."

It's better to be able to say, "I'm glad I did," than to have to say, "I wish I had."

Judge: "I can not conceive of a meaner, more cowardly act than yours. You have left your wife. Do you realize that you are a deserter?"

Sam: "Jedge, if you knew dat lady as I does, you wouldn't call me do deserter. Jedge, I'se a refugee."

Build a home first. A home is the recognized standard of security. Its safety is unquestioned.

Maiden Aunt: "I've got George's birthday present all picked out—a canary."

George's Fiancee: "Why, er, do you think George is fond of canaries?"

Aunt: "I'm sure of it. I heard him telling about a friend he plays golf with who got a birdie and he positively seemed to be envious."

Lump Coal for furnaces. Hand picked.

Thank Goodness

"Hullo, Bill! How's your wife this evening?"

"She's sinking."

"What, is she ill?"

"No. Just washing dishes."

Jack: "Have you any of those Al Smith cigars yet?"

Jim: "No; what are they like?"

Jack: "They come from the sidewalks of New York."

We have Ready Roofing. All grades.

Daughter: "No, dad, I won't need any clothes this winter."

Father: "Ye gods! I was afraid it would come to that."
